Nick Korolev : Teddy before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Teddy:

In this quirky comedy screenplay, West Virginia Junior Senator Frank Barnes of the Progressive Party has his heart in the right place wanting to change things for the better, but his campaign for the presidency, though sincere, lacks vitality. That is ... until his best friend, Mike, gives him a birthday present of an antique copy of 'Alice In Wonderland' bound in pigskin that was purchased at an antique book store in New York City. It comes with more than the signature of Teddy Roosevelt ... it is possessed by TR's ghost who is determined to give the young senator all the help he needs to get the country back on course with a government that truly serves all Americans and not just the elite.
