The story of the making of a film By A Customer When he was young, Michael Powell saw a documentary about the evacuation of Hirta (St. Kilda), he always wanted to make a film about it. What happens when the people of a lonely, windswept island can no longer survive as a community ? This story examines the hardships of such a life and the decisions they must make, whether to stay where their families have worked died to establish this hard-working community or to leave and give the next generation a better chance. This book documents how Powell his film crew stayed on the Hebridean island of Foula to make this dramatic film.

Describes the author's attempt to make a film about how the outer Isles of Scotland were being de-populated. The book reveals that the islanders plight was mirrored in the obstacles the film crew themselves had to overcome.
